Saving Endangered Animals

Somewhere in a river, Mexico

12th June, 2019

Dear humans,

Please save axolotls!

We are a small group of axolotls, living in the waters of Mexico. You are making us extinct and you may never see us unless you stop doing these things.

As my mother said, “The first thing someone does is usually the worst thing he does. So first, please stop polluting the seas, rivers and lakes. These places are our habitats and if you don’t stop polluting them, we may have no homes and places to live in. Also, polluting our habitat also kills our prey in that area which makes us starve!

Second, even though we have regeneration abilities, when you are reconstructing or building near a river, don’t throw broken pieces or debris into the river. It does not only severely harm us and take us a few weeks to recover. But also render us completely vulnerable to predator attacks. Debris contains bacteria and viruses so which affect our regeneration abilities.

Third, please stop eating us! In Mexico, our flesh is considered a “delivery”! Adding up the polluting and debris damage, we cannot ever survive in the waters of Mexico. So stop eating us!

We beg you to rethink your actions and help make our (and your) world better again (since we have only world).

Yours faithfully,

A group of axolotls
