X-men: days in the future past

X-men: days in the future past is an action, adventure and Sci-fi movie. The director of the movie is Bryan Singer. The story is set in a temple and it is winter there. The casts are Hugh Jackman, Jennifer Lawrence, Micheal Fassbender, James McAvoy, Patrick Stewart and Lan Mckellen.

X-men is about a mutant called Logan who goes back to the past and changes what happened in the future of Sentinels who are enormous robots trying to pose a threat to humanity and mutants. The inventor of the Sentinels is Dr. Bolivar Trask. It is only meant to keep mutants away but it loses control and tries wiping humanity out.

The plot I liked the most was when Quick Silver stopped time and ran in the kitchen moving the bullets away from Wolverine, Magneto, Professor X and pointed the guns at the security guards. My favourite character was Quick Silver because he could run fast and save people from explosion or danger.

The twist was when William Stryker was pulling Logan out of the river, I was surprised that Stryker's eyes turned yellow. It could be a mutant who pretended to be Stryker like Mystique or another kind of mutant. The visual effects were high-budget and slow because the powers of the characters were powerful. I liked the costumes because the costumes were realistic.

I recommend this film to engineers and adults only because there were some disturbing scenes and engineers should always be careful because what they built can destroy humanity.
